How to Determine Letter Spacing

As a general rule for capital letters, use the number of characters per line x height of letter to determine required length of sign. Count spaces as a character. Add space for left and right margins (i.e. - 1" each margin). Count ½" space for punctuation marks. Lower case letters generally take up 25% less linear space than capital letters.

(Tip: Calculate length required for capital letters, then multiply by .75. Add desired margin lengths.)
Adjust for condensed or extended letterstyles.
